Cheetah

The cheetah is the fastest animal to roam the earth with top speeds of 113 km per hour.

- A cheetah can go up to speeds from 0 to 113 km per hour in a matter of seconds.
- Though fast, cheetahs tire very quickly and need to rest before they burst into top gear again.
- Cheetahs weigh between 45-60 kilograms and are amongst the smallest members of the cat family.
- Cheetahs have great eyesight and are able to sight their prey from five kilometers away during the daytime.
- Cheetahs are the only members of the cat family unable to roar. However, they can purr quite loudly especially when they are in a group or during one of their grooming sessions.
- As opposed to other cat family members like lions and leopards who hunt at night, cheetahs are able to hunt only during the day.

- Cheetahs have blunt claws and a light body weight which makes them vulnerable to their enemies. It generally gives up if a larger animal confronts it during a fight or a hunt due to these physical restrictions.
- Cheetahs have a poor night vision which prevents hunting at night. They are also unable to climb trees due to their blunt claws and this gives them a distinct disadvantage during hunting.
- A cheetah is recognizable by the dark lines, known as tear lines that run from each eye towards the mouth. These tear lines protect the cheetah from the sun and give them a long-distance vision that's necessary during hunting or protection from other predators. These tear lines protect the cheetah from the sun and give them a long-distance vision that's necessary during hunting or protection from other predators.

Something To Think About As The New Year Begins

There are two days in every week about which we should not worry, two days which should be kept from fear and apprehension.

One of these days is "YESTERDAY" with its mistakes and cares, its faults and blunders, its aches and pains. "YESTERDAY" has passed forever beyond our control.

All the money in the world cannot bring back "YESTERDAY." We cannot erase a single word we said. "YESTERDAY" is gone.

The other day we should not worry about is "TOMORROW" with its possible adversities, its burdens, its large promise and poor performances. "TOMORROW" is beyond our control.

“TOMORROW’S” sun will still rise, either in splendor or behind a mask of clouds, but it will rise. Until it does, we have no stake in “TOMORROW,” for it is yet unborn.

This leaves only one day — “TODAY.” Any person can fight the battles of just one day. It is only when you and I add the burdens of those two awful eternities — “YESTERDAY” and “TOMORROW” — that we break down. It is not the experience of “TODAY” that drives people mad— it is remorse of bitterness for something which happened “YESTERDAY” and dread of what will happen “TOMORROW.”
