2 Corinthians 11:23 – 30

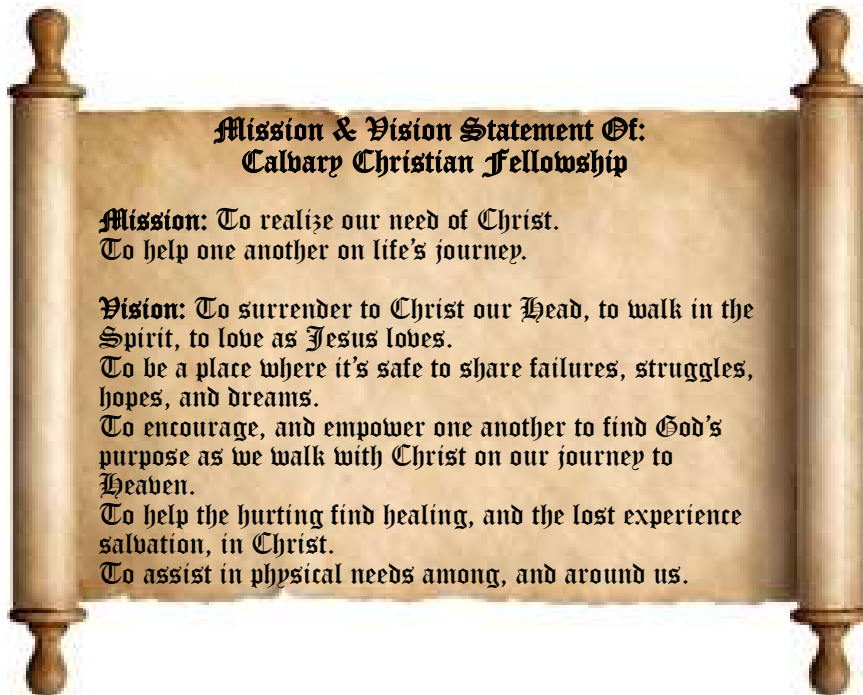

Paul spent years serving Christ, yet he experienced continual suffering. It doesn't seem fair, does it? Why would God let him go through so much pain? It's a question many of us ask today about ourselves. We think the Lord should protect us from hardships, but He doesn't always do so.

Maybe our reasoning is backward. We think faithful Christians don't deserve to suffer, but from God's perspective, suffering is part of being a Christian. If we all had lives of ease without pain, we'd never really know God, because we would never need Him. Like it or not, adversity teaches us things that simply reading the Bible never will.

I'm not saying we don't need to know Scripture; that's our foundation for faith. But if what we believe is never tested, it remains head knowledge. How will we ever know the Lord can be trusted in the midst of trouble if we've never experienced hardships? God gives us opportunities to apply scriptural truths to the difficulties facing us, and in the process, we find Him faithful.

Trials can be a means of building faith or an avenue to discouragement and self-pity—it's up to you. But if you'll apply God's Word to your situation, your trust in Him and your faith will be strengthened through adversity.
