Can Bees See Colors? July 13, 2012

Scientists believe that bees can see colors! Sadly, some of these scientists do not believe God created the earth. They say everything in the world came into being by chance, taking millions of years to develop. These scientists have concluded that bee vision evolved before attractive flower petal colors evolved. They think bees developed special vision and this caused flowers to evolve more attractive petal colors.1 But is this true? What does the Bible tell us about bees and flowers?

God created plants on Day Three of Creation Week (Genesis 1:11-13), before He created insects on Day Five. God created flowers first and designed their colors to appear attractive to the bees He would later create, so that the flowers would be pollinated by the bees and reproduce. God designed the bees to have special eyesight that would draw them to flowers. God says that everything He created was very good, and we can certainly see that as we learn more about the harmonious relationship between flowers and bees!

~BIRTHDAYS AND ANNIVERSARIES~

May 21, Happy Birthday! Victoria Yoder, 2009

I never panic if the gate to our home is left open and the dog gets out. This is because I have trained him to salivate at the sound of a hand squeezed toy horn. Ever since he was a puppy he knows that if he hears that sound and responds, he gets a meat treat. He never fails to come running because he knows that I keep my word.

In speaking of a Godly person, Psalm 15:4 says he "swears to his own hurt, and changes not." In other words if he says that he will do something, he will do it, even if it hurts him to keep his word. However, it's not always possible for a human being to keep a promise. A father may promise his son a bike for Christmas, but a financial collapse or his own death may not make it possible. But God always keeps His word—because with Him, nothing is impossible. You can reply on His "exceeding great and precious promises" more than you can that the sun will be shining tomorrow. -Ray Comfort, <http://www.onthebox.us/>

A young boy enters a barber shop and the barber whispers to his customer ...

..., "This is the dumbest kid in the world. Watch while I prove it to you." The barber puts a dollar bill in one hand and two quarters in the other, then calls the boy over and asks, "Which do you want, son?"

The boy takes the quarters and leaves. "What did I tell you?" said the barber. "That kid never learns!"

Later, when the customer leaves, he sees the same young boy coming out of the ice cream store. "Hey, son! May I ask you a question? Why did you take the quarters instead of the dollar bill?"

The boy licked his cone and replied, "Because the day I take the dollar, the game's over!"
