The Valuable Truth about Worry, Faith, and Your Future

JANUARY 26, 2015
Recently, I was trying to find my way to a friend's house. I had been there only once before and wasn't sure I could find it again. I had an idea of where he lived, but didn't know the roads to get there. I could have called him and asked for directions, but for some reason I didn't. As I traveled, I prayed. I came to one road that I knew was close to where he lived, but it didn't quite seem right. So I kept going. I came to a second road and it felt right, so I turned onto it. I knew his street angled off that road, but there were several angled streets. I passed number one, sure it wasn't that one. Passed number two--then there it was. I about ran into an oncoming car, but this street looked right. I was just about to give up and head back out to the main road when I drove right by his place. I was happy to have found it and surprised how easy it actually was. Following God is like that. We may have an idea of where we're going, like what our interests are and what we're good at doing, but we really don't know the specifics of the journey. We don't know how long we'll be teaching school or building homes. We don't know if God will lead us to go back to college or if He'll call us overseas. We don't know if we'll get married or be single the rest of our lives. But here's the truth: it doesn't matter. God reveals our life path one step at a time. You don't have to worry about the future. He'll let you know when you need to quit that job. He'll tell you if you should pursue that girl. He'll nudge you if you're supposed to go into foreign missions. However, He doesn't necessarily tell us through words. We like when God writes something visible or speaks out loud. But it's rarely that significant. Usually, it's just an impression. "It seemed right," as the apostle Luke opened his gospel. We get into trouble when we expect God to tell us something through one or two ways of communication. He communicates all the time, only we usually miss it. What impression do you have?

"Something should be done about . . ."

"Someone should start a school . . ."

"Why don't more people get involved in . . . ?"

"It bugs me how . . . !"

Could it be that while you're busy fasting and praying about what to do next year, God's already telling you? Only, you didn't recognize it because it seemed more like a thought than a spoken word. Don't worry about the future. Jesus said that. And while I know it's a lot easier said than done, walk forward in faith knowing that He'll show you which road is right just when you need to turn.
