CHILDREN'S CORNER

The whelk uses its radula (a tongue-like feature with rows of teeth) to bore a hole into the shell of its prey to reach the protected flesh. The whelk uses its radula (a tongue-like feature with rows of teeth) to bore a hole into the shell of its prey to reach the protected flesh. It then sucks out the flesh.

A whelk is generally light gray to tan, often having brown and white streaks.

The thick-lipped, spiral shell has an uneven surface with many protrusions. The shell coils in a right-hand direction and has a long siphonal canal. The shape of the whelk depends on the waves that impact the creature. The whelk has a large, muscular foot with which it holds its victim.

Fun Facts: The color of the whelk depends on the foods that it eats. Whelk egg masses, resembling clumps of puffed rice, are commonly found on beaches in early summer. The whelk is one of the most common rocky-shore gastropods in temperate regions.

CLASS: Gastropoda (gastropods, slugs, and snails) ORDER: Sorbeoconcha
 FAMILY: Muricidae, Buccinidae, and Melongenidae SPECIES: About 15 species
 Size: From 1 in (2.5 cm) up to 16 in (41 cm) Depth: Up to 160 ft (48 m) Diet: Oysters, clams, mussels, and scallops Habitat: Rocky shores of northwestern and northeastern Atlantic coasts -Kids Answers,

Martha, Martha –

Luke 10:38-42 (Cowboy Paraphrase)

There once were two sisters. One named Martha and one named Mary.

Mary sat at the Lord's feet and listened intently to everything Jesus had to say. Jesus told her all about a great and loving God, and about a glorious place called heaven, and about God's plan to make it possible for ordinary people like her to spend eternity with God in heaven. It all sounded too good to be true.

Martha, on the other hand – being so much more practical than her sister and realizing all that had to be done – busied herself in the kitchen. After all, she had at least 13 hungry men waiting in her living room to be fed.

Martha thought it would only be right if her no-good, lazy sister helped her prepare the meal, but Jesus said,

"Martha, Martha, you are worried and upset about many things, but only one thing is needed. Mary has chosen what is better."

If you have never met a Martha – I am a Martha. With our three fall bull sales along with all of my other projects, speaking engagements and activities, the past three months have been extremely busy for me. It seems as though I am always jumping from one busy period and/or deadline to another busy period and/or deadline.

Sometimes I get so busy and overwhelmed I forget what is really important. I forget about God and what he has done for me through his son Jesus. I forget that compared to what God has done for me, nothing else really matters.

What about you? Are you so busy, worried and/or concerned with your work and other activities that you are missing the point? Could you be classified as a Martha?

We need to take time to be like Martha's sister Mary. We need to take time to communicate with God. We need to take time to read God's Word – the Bible. We need to take time to thank God for all he has done for us.

"Seek first his kingdom and his righteousness, and all these things will be given to you as well."

Matthew 6:33

If we give God the proper place in our lives, he will take care of our daily concerns and needs. This is so simple – and yet it is very difficult for most of us to put into practice.
